Most of the time (agree)	The site is a little cumbersome and has a learning curve, but once you get it, you get it!	I'd love to learn more about the catalog search function. I've never had great luck with it and I'm not sure if it's because I'm not using it to its full potential or if it's just bad.	Awesome! I love it! (Very satisfied)	N/A (Doesn't apply to me/my students)
No! (Strongly disagree)		The names of features should be explicit. For example, why/what is the meaning of "back office" - especially for student use, labels need to be self-explanatory. Also - The "Hold" feature needs to be cancelable. When the Hold button is clicked, there is no way to go back and undo.	N/A (Doesn't apply to me/my students)	N/A (Doesn't apply to me/my students)

More global update functions (e.g., the ability to renew all checked out items at once) and a more seamlessly integrated searching/reporting process would be most welcome. One function in particular that I would use constantly, if it was available, would be the ability to do a blank power search with certain parameters set in place. Also, defaulting the check out search to patron name rather than patron and item records in general would always be preferred (unless the search has been reset, item records rather than patrons are currently reported first — if I want to search for an item I

Not great (dissatisfied)	Awesome! I love it! (Very satisfied)	For Middle and High school libraries- I suggest keeping the main digital resources - databases like Gale and ProQuest, Noodle tools a few others the same and quit changing and add the latest form of new knowledge to help us research...to our libraries! It's too hard to learn the new formats of material to have one teacher and 1 students use it for a year then get something else new the following year...lets master the tools and resources we currently have and then the students and teachers can master the ones "they chose" in the future. This is always an issue I see in every library...wasted money for the latest and greatest...	Monthly	Make it user friendly and have everything all librarians will need when they look for information...

		In theory, Newsbank should be a useful resource, but, in practice, the interface is not user-friendly. Also, I'm not familiar with Newsbank Research Rocket and would be interested to learn more about it. Quite honestly, I've never personally used any of the streaming media services listed here. I promote them to my staff when prompted, but I'm not sure how much any of those folks use them either. I selected "I like it" for each of these rather than N/A because I appreciate that they are there as an option (though I'm not sure that makes them worth purchasing). I'm pretty excited about Swank, though I haven't had a chance to use it myself yet. Almost always (very satisfied)	Almost always (very satisfied)	Almost always (very satisfied)		Would love to see Kathleen Odean back for elementary peeps
Almost always (very satisfied)	Almost always (very satisfied)	Almost always (very satisfied)	The SLS staff rocks! I know that isn't the most professional wording, but it's true. Always kind, helpful, patient, knowledgeable, and awesome with anticipating our needs and future trends.

			Each of the members of the School Library System staff brings something unique to the table and so, when taken as a whole, the experience for the end-user (in this case, the school librarians in the region) is complete. Also, I cannot speak more highly of Ted Rozelsky and his unmatched ability and commitment to solving technology-related problems. He is absolutely essential to	I am appreciative of all of the advocacy efforts made by the School Library System on behalf of our school libraries, but none more so than the financial and logistical support I've received over the course of my entire career that has allowed me to take advantage of countless professional development opportunities, especially state and national conferences. The learning and networking that occurs at these events are essential to my professional practice and have helped me become the leader in my field that I am today. Also, I became a school librarian because I wanted to share my passion for books and reading with children and young adults and, hopefully, spark and/or nurture that passion in them. That being said, I am always interested in professional development related to this aspect of my job, especially collection development. Lastly, I would say that rather than focusing on bigger, better, or more, I would rather make sure that the structures that have been put in place by specific people (Mary Kay, Michele, and Ted) are able to be maintained by people other than those individuals so that the exemplary service that we've been gifted with over the last few years doesn't go away when
