If: Designing Student Assessments	Good teaching requires both assessment of learning and assessment for learning. Assessments of learning ensure that teachers know that students have learned the intended outcomes. These assessments must be designed in such a manner that they provide evidence of the full range of learning outcomes; that is, different methods are needed to assess reasoning skills than for factual knowledge. Furthermore, such assessments may need to be adapted to the particular needs of individual students; an ESL student, for example, may need an alternative method of assessment to allow demonstration of understanding. Assessment for learning enables a teacher to incorporate assessments directly into the instructional process, and to modify or adapt instruction as needed to ensure student understanding. Such assessments, although used during instruction, must be designed as part of the planning process. Such formative assessment strategies are ongoing and may be used by both teachers and students to monitor progress towards the understanding the learning outcomes. The elements of component 1e are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Congruence with instructional outcomes Assessments must match learning expectations</li> <li>• Criteria and standards Expectations must be clearly defined</li> <li>• Design of formative assessments Assessments for learning must be planned as part of the instructional process</li> <li>• Use for planning Results of assessment guide future planning</li> </ul> Indicators include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Lesson plans indicate correspondence between assessments and instructional outcomes</li> <li>• Assessment types are suitable to the style of outcome</li> <li>• Variety of performance opportunities for students</li> <li>• Modified assessments are available for individual students as needed</li> <li>• Expectations clearly written with descriptors for each level of performance</li> <li>• Formative assessments are designed to inform minute-to-minute decision-making by the teacher during instruction</li> </ul>

If: Designing Student Assessments	Assessment procedures are not congruent with instructional outcomes; the proposed approach contains no criteria or standards. Teacher has no plan to incorporate formative assessment in the lesson or unit, nor any plans to use assessment results in designing future instruction.	Some of the instructional outcomes are assessed through the proposed approach, but others are not. Assessment criteria and standards have been developed, but they are not clear. Approach to the use of formative assessment is rudimentary, including only some of the instructional outcomes. Teacher intends to use assessment results to plan for future instruction for the class as a whole.	Teacher’s plan for student assessment is aligned with the instructional outcomes; assessment methodologies may have been adapted for groups of students. Assessment criteria and standards are clear. Teacher has a well-developed strategy for using formative assessment and has designed particular approaches to be used. Teacher intends to use assessment results to plan for future instruction for groups of students.	Teacher’s plan for student assessment is fully aligned with the instructional outcomes, with clear criteria and standards that show evidence of student contribution to their development. Assessment methodologies have been adapted for individual students, as needed. The approach to using formative assessment is well designed and includes student as well as teacher use of the assessment information. Teacher intends to use assessment results to plan future instruction for individual students.
